

MISTOOK FRIEND FOR MOUNTAIN LION AND SHOT HIM TO DEATH

(From Saturday's Daily)

Mistaking his friend and fellow miner for a mountain lion they were shot yesterday afternoon at 9 o'clock in the Bradshaw mountains. Galbraith died from the wound an hour later. Immediately after the shooting Crown King was taken to the hospital. Dr. King and a few friends hurriedly removed the body, but Galbraith was dead when they arrived. The body was taken to Crown King to be prepared for interment.

Crown King is almost prostrated at his home in Crown King over the shooting of his friend of many years' standing. His request will probably be held to.

They saw a mountain lion near Crown King's home at Bradshaw Mountain last night. They chased the animal away and at daybreak started on a trail through the mountains. They followed it over a circuitous route covering several miles, reaching a gulch where its tracks appeared fresh. They started Galbraith climbing the mountain on one side and Crume the mountain on the other. Before Crume reached the summit he noticed the brush stirring on the opposite side of the gulch and seeing what he believed to be the part of the lion, raised his 30.30 rifle and fired. The bullet passing through Galbraith's body. Crume hurried across the gulch and almost buried when he saw the life blood flowing from a wound in his friend's side. He immediately hurried to Crown King for assistance.

Crown King says that he did not believe that Galbraith had time to reach the spot on the mountain where he met his death before the fatal shot was fired. Galbraith had on a tan hunting coat, which probably caused Crume to mistake him for their quarry. The scene of the shooting is near Horse-thief siding on the Bradshaw Mountain Railroad.

Galbraith was a resident of many years' standing in the county. He was a hoisting engineer and miner by occupation. He worked at the Oro mine in the Bradshaws for many years and also in other camps in different parts of the county.

NOTHING FREE BUT AIR AND WATER, AND WATER ALAS! THERE WAS NONE

(Special to the Journal-Miner.)

BISBEE, September 4.—The great "free" barbecue of the Warren District Democratic club held at Lewis Springs Sunday, was pulled off as per schedule and it was a great financial success—paradoxical as that may seem—as well as a success from the standpoint of attendance, but as a political event—the first gun of the campaign and the initial step toward a winning fight this fall—it was a dismal failure.

In the matter of attendance it was all that could be desired although it was advertised that preparations would be made to take care of 5000 people, about one-third of which, from an un-enthusiastic standpoint, being present. In Bisbee 715 adult tickets, (about a third of which were for the gentle sex) and 113 children's tickets were sold, while Douglas sent about 30 in similar proportions. Many came from Benson, Tombstone, St. David and other surrounding places and there were sufficient Republicans present to lend tone and dignity to the assembly.

Free Affair—Nil.

Although extensively advertised as a free affair, nothing was free except the air, the water from the springs, the barbecued meat, bread and pickles—if you could get to them without losing an arm. Consequently the barbecue as mentioned was a great financial success as there was no ice water at hand and a desire for dancing led to a premium. Of course, the speaking was free, though that didn't count much. But no lodge or church fair, or Bryan campaign committee ever went after the dinero stronger than the W. double D. C. And they got it too.

No one could spend a bit—it was four-hits or nothing. One would naturally think that such a program could not be made to stick, but it did and the leaders of the Democracy of Dear Old Cochise could give the poorest Nebraskan some pointers on raising a campaign fund that would surprise him and stimulate his quest for the elusive silver circles, even if they couldn't give him the actual lure.

Of course there weren't enough coaches to carry the crowd to the springs, but as this was nothing unusual for the E. P. & S. W., no disappointment was felt and it was accepted as not out of the ordinary.

There wasn't quite enough shade to go around either, but that feature did not seem to cause any inconvenience.

Spellbinding Starts.

The scheduled program began at 11 o'clock when President Fred Sutter of the W. D. D. C. mounted the rostrum—the steps leading to the dancing pavilion and stated the ostensible purpose of the gathering. He expressed great gratification and unbounded surprise at the extent of the assemblage, stating that, whereas, the club had expected about 300 or 400 people (wouldn't that jar your Huachuca peaches) there were fully 2000 present. Of course, the hand some executive of the organization didn't explain how he thought three or four hundred people could get away with a barbecued herd of steers and a carload of—lemonade.

He also made some remarks about the propitious weather, stating that arrangements had been made with the "god of Democracy" (whoever that unfortunate alleged deity is) to withhold all dampness from above until after the picnic, in which it seems that Fred had been given a bum steer, as there was some precipitation later in the day.

The Principal Thing.

After announcing that coupon books could be purchased at the stand (presided over by Johnny Bowen), Mr. Sutter took great pleasure in introducing that talented and eloquent young orator from Cochise county, Honorable Henry F. Ashurst.

Mr. Ashurst made a very good impression on the crowd owing to his favorable personal appearance, which is very Apollo-like, both in build and countenance, to say nothing of the diplomatic cut of his jib—or rather his frock coat. His address was a masterpiece of eloquence, replete with flowery similes and metaphors and abounding in floral intricacies. It made a big hit with the audience, but few of which had heard his speech nominating Mark Smith at the Prescott convention.

In the course of his peroration, he took occasion to laud Bryan, the peerless, noble and migraite leader of Democracy from Nebraska and he also eulogized Mark Smith unmercifully. He said that Bryan would if he were elected president, lead the people gently by the hand, (as he did in the "over convention") and would not grasp them by the throat as does Roosevelt, the speaker forgetting for the moment that it was the trusts that Roosevelt "grasped by the throat."

Battle of the Flowers.

The boy orator from Flag went the limit in showering floral offerings on the defenseless head of Marcus Aurelius. He compared him successively with Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Jefferson and "a fixed star in the Heavens above" and characterized him as the only living or dead man who had ever drawn blood from the "rhinoceros side of Uncle Joe Cannon" (which nothing but four big ones could do). He rose to supreme heights in his eulogy of the delegate and his superb qualities, just as he did years ago. He declared in stentorian tones that it was Mark Smith alone who saved Arizona from that worse than death fate—joint statehood, or words to that effect and declared convincingly that no one can ever take Mark Smith's place in Washington, which indicates a more than supreme confidence. The speaker, also made some mention of Dear Old Cochise, but feeling that he was anticipating a speech to follow, he cut these remarks short.

Humorous Henry.

The speaker seemed to catch the crowd when his remarks became intentionally humorous and he frequently rose to a high degree of fine humor, especially so in the story about a Texan who had an altercation with a negro on a train and cried because he had promised his mother on her lying bed that he would never kill another nigger in that county and the train was going so slow. Everyone who heard the story saw the point and it created much amusement.

Lunch and dancing followed Mr. Ashurst and an emergency tax of four bits per male head was placed on those who took advantage of the terpsichorean treat, after the management had ascertained that the crowd wouldn't fall for a case-note charge.

Hail to the Chief.

There was a suspension of dancing for the purpose of sweeping the mud off the floor and to give Delegate Mark Smith, the real guest of honor a chance to speak. Although it was hardly necessary to introduce the speaker, that formality was assigned to Mayor George Neale of Bisbee who told of the delegate's long service and stated that he and jeopardized his private interests, had given up a lucrative law practice because of his love for the people of Arizona, all of which made a very effective tribute to the delegate.

Mr. Smith began his address in the usual manner. He referred to the criticisms of his enemies for referring to "Dear Old Cochise," "Dear Old Yavapai," etc., and told why Cochise county occupied such a warm spot in his heart. How 28 years ago, he had come to Tombstone and had been stricken with disease. How when he awoke, he saw standing at his bed side a big husky six-foot-three man who informed him that had "jes come down to take care of ye," just like the little ingenu in the ten-twenty-thirty wild and woolly melodrammer. Upon this the delegate presented his great love for Cochise county. He also referred as usual to the old comrades who has passed away since his last visit and his remarks were very interesting—to the speaker.

Foraker Eulogized.

Then the delegate got into politics which consisted of an attack on Roosevelt and the Republicans of Arizona; the latter for not sending their delegates to Chicago instructed for Senator Foraker. He stated that Foraker prevented joint statehood, which rather puts the kibosh on the claims of the Democratic press that Smith, himself, prevented joint statehood, though the candidate for re-election admitted that he had had considerable to do with defeating the Hamilton bill. He told of his terrible fight in Congress "we had" to prevent the outrage and roasted his critics for roasting him.

Mr. Smith also spoke of the high protective tariff; how the cost of living of the workman had been increased, basing his statement on the increase in the price of cigarette tobacco, while the people who produced the cigarette had had their wages cut, which was not exactly correct as tobacco workers have had an increase in wages of several hundred per cent during the last decade. He compared costs of living in this country and European countries, but said nothing of the difference in wages in favor of this country. He asserted that the trusts had closed down their mills and factories and have announced that they won't open until after Taft is elected. Then, he said, they would open with wages reduced to three-quarters of what they have been, though he had no facts upon which to base such an absurd assertion.

Accused of Theft.

TIP TOP ORES TO BE WORKED AGAIN

Big Development Plans For Once Famous Silver Mine

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Tip Top Heath Mining and Milling Company held in the company's offices here yesterday, H. D. Ross, F. E. Wager, E. J. F. Horne, J. R. Lowry and E. G. Wager were elected directors for the ensuing year. After the adjournment of the stockholders' meeting the directors elected E. G. Wager, president, J. R. Lowry, vice president, and H. D. Ross, secretary and treasurer. The expense accounts of the last year were audited and found correct.

A new track will be put in the tunnel, which is 1,100 feet in length, and taps the shaft at a depth of 200 feet. There is a good tonnage of tungsten ore blocked out in this level which it is proposed to stop as soon as the tunnel is cleaned and the track in place. The directors announced yesterday that it was the intention to unwater the main shaft which follows the vein to a point 600 feet below the mouth of the tunnel. However, this will not be commenced until the track is placed in the tunnel and the exploitation of that level well under way.

The Tip Top mine was one of the large silver producers of the county in the 70's. Work ceased on it when the price of silver fell below the dollar mark. Later the mill was partially dismantled by the removal of all the machinery adapted to the treatment of gold ore. This will necessitate the replacement of the machinery sold before the product of the mine can be treated on the ground.

YAVAPAI WOMAN JUST MISSES WRECK

(From Saturday's Daily)

Mrs. Peter Laux of McCabe, who arrived here last night from a four month's visit with relatives in Chicago and Milwaukee, gives a thrilling description of a railroad accident near Earl, Colorado, between noon and 1 o'clock Thursday, in which three men lost their lives. An engine pulling a freight train into Earl blew up, killing the engineer, fireman and head brakeman. The accident occurred less than a minute before the passenger train on which she was riding reached the scene. The passenger train was only brought to a standstill immediately behind the caboose of the train after strenuous efforts of the engineer to avoid a head-on collision. She believes that if the accident had occurred at night that a collision could not have been avoided, resulting in more loss of life.

The engineer, fireman and brakeman were killed outright. Their bodies were beyond recognition, the arms and legs of two being blown from the trucks. The engine is a total wreck. Pieces of it were blown a half mile in either direction and what remained of it was lying alongside the track, a tangled mass of iron.

The freight train was pulling into Earl immediately ahead of the passenger, running, she believes, on the passenger train's time. It is believed that the engine crew in an effort to reach the station to avoid a delay of the train following allowed the water in the boiler to run too low, the explosion following the starting of the pump or injector.

Mrs. Laux, who stated that this was the only unpleasant incident witnessed during her absence, will join her husband at McCabe today.

thing, told of the President's popularity and said that it was due to his stealing Bryan's doctrines, although he didn't accuse Roosevelt of stealing the free silver or government ownership doctrines from the Peerless One. Throughout the speech which lasted over an hour the delegate had a hard time to hold his audience as it was evident that the majority of people present had not come to listen to speeches. As to the merits of the address, not a point was made by the speaker, and if any change was effected in the political complexion of his listeners, it was not in favor of Mark Smith or Democracy. It was principally an outpouring of east wind and vapidity, which created but little enthusiasm even among the Democrats and only ancient grayhaired Democratic platitudes aroused the apathetic audience to a display of applause.

After the speech Mr. Smith stated that he regretted having not paid a tribute to the Warren District Democratic club because of the great success of the barbecue, and which he had intended doing.

As stated in the foregoing, the affair was a grand success from a financial standpoint, as it is estimated that between $500 and $1000 was netted this campaign fund.

SEES BIG FUTURE FOR WICKENBURG DISTRICT

Another Big Deal In That Section Just Closed

According to a special from Phoenix, papers are about to be signed in Wickenburg for the transfer of the McNeill-Willett group of five claims, southwest of the Vulture mine, in Maricopa county, for a consideration of $50,000.

J. C. Reed states that when he left Wickenburg Tuesday the negotiations had been brought to a close and that all remaining to complete the deal was the signing of the papers.

For several years the claims have been owned by Dan McNeill and Chas. Willett, and run high in lead and silver values. About 300 feet of development has uncovered several well defined ore deposits.

Reed is enthusiastic over mining conditions in and around Wickenburg. He says the sale of the Vulture property to Boston capitalists has already started a revival in mining that is bound to make Wickenburg the center of great activity in the next year.

"The world is learning that we have the mines, and that all it takes to make them great is capital for development purposes," remarked Reed. "Wickenburg is certain to be the center of a great mining district. We have known this for years, but not until now have we seemed on the eve of the big mining boom that is to bring wealth to many and provide work for thousands of miners."

In Wickenburg great preparations are being made for this activity in the nearby districts, in several of which are mining properties that are bound to become important producers. Ice plants, smelting, plants, supply houses and such improvements are being constructed a short distance away from Wickenburg.

The formal transfer of the Vulture to the new owners was made in Wickenburg yesterday.

CAMERON A WINNER.

In Ralph H. Cameron of Flagstaff, the republicans have an exceptionally strong candidate for delegate to congress. Though not an orator, he has an attractive personality, and is unusually successful as a vote-getter. He is a well-to-do mining man who knows by experience what it means to do one's own assessment work. He has also been a cattle man and a sheep man during his life of half a century. Cameron served three terms as sheriff of Cochise county, and is now in his fourth year as supervisor of that county, winning each time by a large majority.

Honest, energetic, jovial, liked by all of his acquaintances irrespective of party affiliation, Cameron will make a decided hit in a whirlwind campaign. Even the democratic newspapers concede that the convention that nominated Cameron was one of complete harmony; and the nomination is warmly seconded by every republican journal in the territory. And, as it is given out that Cameron will spend a large portion of the campaign in Cochise and Gila, heretofore the leading democratic counties, the retirement to private life of Mark Smith is assured.—Paradise Record.
